An undocumented immigrant whose wife voted for Donald Trump has been deported to Mexico amid the President's crackdown on people living in the US illegally.

Roberto Beristain, 44, arrived in the US in 1998

2000. He and his wife Helen went on to have th home in Granger, Indiana.

Mr Beristain was making a regular check-in visit with immigration officials, who had allowed him to stay, when they changed their minds last month and detained him.

It came after the President promised to deport millions of people, following his claim that Mexican immigrants were "bringing drugs. They're bringing crime. They're rapists and Ms Beristain, who voted for Mr Trump because of his immigration policies, said when her husband was arrested: "We don't want to have cartels here, you don't want to have drugs in your high schools, you don't want killers next to you. "You want to feel safe when you leave your house "Mr Beristain said. "The good people would not be deported, the good people would be checked."

According to CNN, Mr Beristain was deported without his lawyer's knowledge. He reportedly said: "They suddenly told me it was time to get my stuff, they put me in the back of a van and sped toward the border."

"I asked to speak with my attorney, but was told there wasn't time for that."

US Immigration and Customs Enforcement confirmed it had deported Mr Beristain on Wednesday, CNN reported. It ended a spell of nearly 20 years living in the US for the businessman.
